From the LA Times, 8 Sep 19:

Justin Dignam

Justin Dignam's love of the water dated back decades. He was a four-year varsity swimmer and water polo player in college, coached the men's water polo teams at Wesleyan University and Iona College and continued to compete in water polo tournaments into his 50s.

Dignam, 58, was the founder and chief executive of Big Fish Employer Services, a payroll company in Placentia. The company's president said in an email that the staff was "shocked and horrified" at his death. Dignam founded the company out of his house in Anaheim Hills in 2003, according to a story last year in the California Business Journal.

USA Water Polo's chief executive, Christopher Ramsey, said in a statement that Dignam was a familiar face, appearing at golf tournaments, Hall of Fame inductions and other events. This July, Dignam passed out medals at the Junior Olympics in Irvine, he said, "savoring the smiles and encouraging everyone to give it their all — just like he did."

I pulled the Exif data from two of Dignam's pictures and plotted them on Google Earth. The picture of the pile of stuff being charged was taken on the other side of the island. The panoramic picture and others of the interior birthday party were taken at Quail Rock, to the West of where the fire occurred.
