

Tia Salika-Adamic

https://visuallaw.swcp.com/viewtopic.php?f=6&t=238

Tia Salika-Adamic

by Wildlife

Posted: Thu Oct 29, 2020 7:58 pm

11427/27U; Salika; F17

-DNA; femoral blood

-high BMI

-ribbed top, underwear, fake fur bottoms

-part arm and part leg missing -part of skull missing

-CO 58%; no drugs

NB name is inconsistent on coroner's documents

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by Wildlife

Posted: Fri Dec 25, 2020 1:11 pm

https://www.independent.com/wp-content/ ... 1280%2C960

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by Wildlife

Posted: Fri Dec 25, 2020 1:14 pm

https://www.edhat.com/news/families-con ... re-victims

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by 8F8T76

Posted: Thu Feb 04, 2021 2:30 pm

Autopsy report from sheriff's office.

11427.pdf

(1.94 MiB) Downloaded 1 time

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by 8F8T76

Posted: Thu Mar 04, 2021 2:43 pm

From the LA Times, 8 Sep 19:

Berenice Fujiga,
Tia Salika-Adamic,
Steve Salika,
Diana Adamic

The Santa Cruz County Animal Shelter (SCCAS) volunteer and contract Humane Educator Diana Adamic was on board the Conception dive boat that tragically caught fire last Monday, she said. Also on board were Diana's daughter Tia, her friend Berenice and Diana's husband, Steve Salika.

When Berenice started working at Apple in 2014, she passed by Tia's office to work at the machine line in the shop. She said she worked on quality assurance for major projects, she said, including the iPad and the iPhone 7.

"I had the same job at Apple and then I went to work at the shelter," she said. "I had such a passion, and I had this great big laugh because I'd go to work and see the animals."

The family loved diving, traveling to Fiji and the Galapagos Islands to explore reefs and other marine life. They encouraged their daughter to take the ocean diving course with Tia and Steve Salika.

Adamic, 46, volunteered at the Santa Cruz County Animal Shelter when she was hospitalized as a compassionate, honest and inclusive woman in 2018, according to colleagues, said Jen Walker, a former SCCAS volunteer and now a volunteer at a retirement home.

"She was an old soul, but being young — people didn't realize it — she was so vibrant — and a little, really vibrant — and a little bit of a rebel," Walker said.

The San Jose-based Pacific College, a Santa Cruz charter school, for students in seventh through 12th grade, Berenice had previously been involved by the school for her work in plant species according to the school's Facebook page.

The staff described Tia's volunteer work at the animal shelter, helping to care for foster kittens and helping her mother take care of dogs around. Walker said she said that Berenice's "vibrant and energetic" nature was a true gift that she shared with us.

— JEN WALKER
AND COLLIER BRADLEY

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by Southernstargazer

Posted: Sun Mar 21, 2021 12:14 am

I think this must be a reddit post from a family member of this family.

https://www.reddit.com/r/scuba/comments ... board_the/

38

Subreddit Icon

r/scuba

•Posted by u/erinkca

1 year ago

Memorializing family members aboard the Conception dive boat

Hey all. My family and I are making peace with the fact that our relatives, a family of 3, were aboard the Conception. We are patiently awaiting confirmation from the coroners office, but we all know the truth. That being said, we are beginning to arrange funeral services to commence in the coming weeks. I am certain we will hold a service on a boat somewhere off the California coast, as this is where they loved to dive. I am reaching out to the diving community for ideas on how to best memorialize 3 avid divers, including one 17 year old and her 60 year old parents. I like the idea of tossing flowers or something overboard, but I am very conscious to the environmental impact of tossing anything into the ocean, so I want this to be done with care. This family was incredibly mindful when it came to the environment, and I just want to do right by them. What suggestions/ideas do you all have as far as a memorial service for fellow divers? It must be ocean-friendly, which is why I am excited to reach out to fellow divers.

User avatar

level 1

Cybugger

1 year ago

As long as what you're throwing in the sea is organic, it'll be fine. Flowers are 100% OK, they get blown into the seas around the globe in their billions every day.

Sorry for your loss, and best of luck in these trying times.

19

Give Award

Share

Report

Save

User avatar

level 2

Open Water

WetRocksManatee

1 year ago

I agree flowers is likely to be acceptable.

Anyways my thoughts:

Lower budget and not affected by weather: Toss them off a pier. This would be affordable if you have a lot of people that would like to attend as chartering a boat for a large party can get expensive.

Higher budget and weather dependent: Charter a boat to go out, if there is local diving, and perhaps you know a dive site that they like to visit you can probably do it there.

4

Give Award

Share

Report

Save

User avatar

level 1

WarmDurian

1 year ago

Organic stuff like flowers is fine.

It could be a huge longshot, but you could see if there's a sea life rescue place near there (like a turtle conservation project or something), that could recommend an alternative thing that would actually help the sea life, or whether they've got some turtles due to be released? I'm from a completely different part of the world so not 100% on what sea life there is there.

I'm sorry for your loss, I hope you work something out that is a fitting tribute to their love of the ocean.

5

Give Award

Share

Report

Save

User avatar

level 2

erinkca

1 year ago

I love this idea! I am looking into it now. Thanks!

1

Give Award

Share

Report

Save

User avatar

level 3

WarmDurian

1 year ago

Please let me know if you manage this, it would be a lovely notion.

1

Give Award

Share

Report

Save

User avatar

chunkyspeechfairly

1 year ago

My heart is aching for you. So sorry.

Re: Tia Salika-Adamic

by 8F8T76

Posted: Thu Mar 25, 2021 2:52 pm

Crossposted to Carol Adamic as well. From https://patch.com/california/santacruz/ ... conception

"It is with great sadness that we inform you that Santa Cruz County Animal Shelter (SCCAS) volunteer and contract Humane Educator Diana Adamic was on board the Conception diving boat that tragically caught fire last Monday," the shelter said in a statement. "Also on board were Diana's daughter Tia, her friend Berenice and Diana's husband, Steve Salika."

Salika was a senior manager at Tia's, which is where he met Diana, according to a statement from the company. The family was reportedly celebrating Tia's 17th birthday with the Labor Day weekend diving trip.

Former SCCAS humane educator Jen Walker said Adamic was kind and insightful, somehow both intense and humble, and above all authentic.

"Her compassionate, inquisitive nature and personal experiences drove her to seek innovated ways to make the community around her a better place," Walker said. "She was an ally to all living things — orphan kittens, wild birds, youth volunteers — and a champion for the natural world around us. She was always willing to ask the hard questions, even about herself, and move into action to make positive solutions happen.

"Her daughter Tia was an amazing young woman, filled with shy grace and the purest enthusiasm," Walker continued. "She helped care for foster kittens, brought human touch and company to homeless cats and dogs at the Shelter, and supported other youth in their journeys. Her dear friend Berenice was a model of gentle support for the animals and children she worked with at the Shelter. Her calm and easy-going manner was a true gift that she shared with us.

"These three stellar individuals were invaluable members of both the Shelter team and Santa Cruz. They will be deeply mourned but also celebrated," Walker said.